

The changing face of work

Resilience, flexibility and agility

Agenda

- Discussion: Futurism
- Video: 1960's vision of 2000
- Reading: Will your job still exist in twenty years' time?
- Grammar: Future forms

Starting off

“The future of work isn’t about jobs, it’s about skills.
Adaptability will be the new currency.” — *Unknown

Lektor

Futurism

Humanity has always tried to predict what the future would look like and this vintage photo collection shows predictions that were either a hit or a miss.

While some people actually managed to predict it rather accurately, many of them look pretty hilarious from today's perspective.

An artist's depiction of the future (1930)

A navigation system as imagined (1950s)

James Bond receives a "text" via his smartwatch in the Spy Who Loved Me (1977)

Will your job still exist in twenty years' time?

No one knows for certain what the careers of the future ¹ will look like. But, without any doubt, some of the jobs and careers which we take for granted ² _____ in the future. We can already see how jobs in shops are starting to vanish as online shopping continues to grow.

However, the kind of job which takes years of study – being a lawyer, or an architect or a doctor, for example – should be safe, shouldn't it?

Maybe not. Intelligence and knowledge ³ _____. For example, a medical consultant can easily be replaced by a robot, ⁴ _____ even more about symptoms than the most experienced doctor and more easily keep up to date with new research.

The kind of jobs which cannot be replaced are those which need the human touch. This is why Sadie Jones, a student at the University of London, has chosen to become a nurse, rather than a doctor. 'I always wanted to be a doctor, but I've realized that I might spend seven years training only to be replaced by a robot. So I'm ⁵ _____ a nursing course next year instead. I can always do more training later when I understand better how the profession ⁶ _____ in the digital age.'

are going to disappear taking which will know will adapt ~~will look like~~ will not be enough

Lektor

Grammar

- | | | |
|---|---|--|
| 1. The team manager won't be at the meeting tomorrow; he's in Berlin at a conference. | → | a prediction based on personal knowledge, opinion or feeling |
| 2. George has decided he's going to study economics at university. | → | intentions or plan made before the time of speaking |
| 3. Their plane lands at 7.00 a.m. on Wednesday. Will you go and meet them? | → | a timetabled or scheduled event. |
| | → | a spontaneous decision; promise or offer |
| 4. I'm leaving at 4.00 p.m. today; I have a dentist's appointment at 4.30 p.m. | → | a fixed plan with a definite time or place. |

Future forms (1)

will

We use will:

- to make a prediction based on personal knowledge, opinion or feeling.
You'll really like the film.
Some children born today will probably live to be 120 years old.
- to make a spontaneous choice or decision. This can include promises, offers, plans, refusals and requests.

I think I'll leave work a bit early today
I'll help you if you like.

Present simple

We use the present simple to talk about a scheduled or timetabled event.

The conference is from 11 to 15 of April.
When does the new academic year start?

going to

We use going to:

- to make a prediction based on evidence in the present.
Look at the traffic. We're going to be late!
- to talk about plans or intentions that were made before the time of speaking.
I think I'm going to look for a new job.

Present continuous

We use the present continuous to talk about arrangements and fixed plans.

We're meeting at the restaurant at 7.30 p.m.
Are you doing anything at the weekend?

Lektor

Future forms (2)

Future continuous

We form the future continuous with will + be + -ing. We use the future continuous to talk about an action in progress at a certain time or over a period of time in the future.

*This time tomorrow I'll be flying to New York.
I hope I won't still be working here in five years.*

Future perfect

We form the future perfect with will + have + past participle. We use the future perfect to talk about an action completed before a certain time in the future or still in progress up to a certain time in the future.

*Do you think you'll have finished the report by the end of the week?
Next month, we'll have lived here for twenty years.*

- We can also use the future perfect continuous, although this is not common. The form is will + have been + -ing.

In September, I'll have been working here for a year.

We often use the future continuous and the future perfect with phrases that specify a time in the future, such as this time tomorrow/next week/next month, by August/the end of the year/2030, in a week's/six months'/ten years' time, an hour/a week/twenty years from now.

This time next week, I'll have finished all my exams*

By the end of the century, humans will be living on the moon.*

In ten years' time, I'll have got married and had three kids.*

A week from now, we'll be lying on the beach.*

Lektor

Other future forms

- be bound/sure/certain/likely to + base verb She's bound to succeed.
- should + base verb The results should arrive tomorrow.
- be due to + base verb The train is due to arrive at 6.30.
- be planning/intending/hoping to + base verb They're planning to expand next year.
- be scheduled/expected/supposed to + base verb The concert is supposed to start at 8.
- look forward to + -ing I'm looking forward to meeting you.

That's all, folks!

